DETAILED ACTION

Allowable Subject Matter

1. Claims 1-69 are allowed.
2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: Jackson et al. (US Pat. 6,546,494 B1) discloses a system for providing power to a device over a network; the system comprising switch/router 14 used to supply power and data signals to the device 16 (PC, IP telephone, small appliance) (col. 2, lines 13-29). Specifically, device 14 receives AC power and converts it to DC power to provide the network device 16 with minimal power. After an initial power pulse is sent to operate device 16, a controller 24, within switch/router 14, determines whether the device 16 should receive more power by measuring an amount of differential voltage across sense resistor 62 (which, as defined in Ohm's law, corresponds to an amount of current that device 16 is drawing), and outputs a voltage level" signal to the controller that is indicative of this differential voltage. The controller 24 may also determine if device 16 is receiving power from another source by measuring the polarity of the voltage across sense circuit 34 produced when the initial power pulse is supplied. A negative polarity relative to the voltage produced when current is provided from power supply 28, indicates that device 16 is receiving power from another source. However, although Jackson et al. discloses a means for providing power to a network device and a means for determining how much power to provide to the device, he does not disclose nor do any other prior art of record disclose in their entirety the claimed device for providing power to a network-based device comprising a first circuit adapted in a first mode of operation to provide a differential voltage based on input signals of opposite polarity received from a first pair of network pathways and in a second mode of operation to contribute to the provisioning of a common voltage based on input signals of a first polarity received from the first pair of pathways; and a second circuit adapted in a first mode of operation to supply the differential voltage based on input signals of opposite polarity received from a second pair of network pathways and in a second mode of operation to contribute to the provisioning of the common voltage based on input signals of a second polarity received from the second pair of pathways..

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
